

Does Houston Need Another Museum?

YES

Does Houston Need Another Museum? Part 1 is a brief look at Houston's place, through polls and rankings that typify the connotation of Houston, in the nation's imagination with regards to museums, culture, intellect, tourism, and related interests.

Does Houston Need Another Museum? Part 2 will look at the extensive subjects that will be explored and interpreted through the museum's exhibits and live topical presentations, most of which are underrepresented in Houston's cultural resources.

Introduction

Houston ranks high as a city that is favorable for business. But Houston ranks poorly in studies and surveys regarding tourism, education and quality of life.

In a series of surveys of 60,000 people conducted by Travelandleisure.com and CNN Headline News, Houston does not rank in the top 25 in most categories, including: Museums, Intelligence, People, Architecture, Restaurants, Shopping and Vacation Destination. The polls reveal or confirm Houston's lack of reference in much of the nation's imagination. Austin, Dallas and San Antonio appear in most of these polls, as do other cities with many similarities to Houston.

Houston fails to rank high in many other quality-of-life categories, such as Livable Cities, and subjects that indicate opportunities for greater cross-cultural experience, such as Intercontinental Travel. The city fails to seize or recognize many of its best opportunities. Conversely, the city recently ranked third in a Forbes poll for Most Stressful City, just behind Las Vegas and Los Angeles.

However, Houston ranked Number 7 by Travelandleisure.com and CNN for Culture. Nationally, people may have some basic knowledge about Houston, outside their thoughts about its freeways, industries and weather. Regardless of how those who were surveyed define "culture" (diversity, traditional interests, elite arts, etc.), many aspects of culture are Houston's greatest strength. Culture is Houston's most positive modern legacy. History, diversity, food traditions, international ties, and extensive impact on the lifeways of people across the nation are all part of Houston's cultural landscape.

Museums and cultural destinations, as well as understanding of an area, yield many economic, education and quality-of-life benefits. As a great cultural resource, a museum can improve knowledge and perception of a city and region, and increase local appreciation and participation, as well as national and international visitation.

With the increase in nationally recognized museums, visitors to the museums increase exponentially; visitors attend not just for the numbers of museums, but for the city or nation's legacy and interpretation through the museums.

For Houston, there will be strength in numbers; increasing quality museums, especially establishing an outstanding museum to define and build on Houston's identity, will increase attraction to Houston and increase attendance for all area museums and cultural resources, as well as entertainment attractions, shops, hotels, and restaurants.

In areas where outsiders may lack knowledge of Houston and the region, or where Houston is perceived to be deficient in cultural, educational and quality-of-life resources, Houston Museum of Culture will fill the void. It will provide tremendous benefits for all Houstonians and their schools, organizations, and businesses.

22. Museum of Fine Arts, Boston, Boston, MA (1.1 million visitors)
23. Pacific Science Center, Seattle, WA (1.02 million visitors)
24. St. Louis Science Center, St. Louis, MO (1.02 million visitors)
25. Smithsonian's Steven F. Udvar-Hazy Center, Chantilly, VA (1 million visitors)

With the increase in nationally recognized museums, visitors to the museums increase exponentially; visitors go not just for the numbers of museums, but for the city's legacy and interpretation through the museums.

Number of ranked museums per city: Washington, D.C. - 6, New York City - 4, Chicago - 3, Boston - 2, Los Angeles - 2, Houston - 1

While Houston had one museum (MFAH) in the poll in 2007 (based on attendance numbers for 2006), in 2009 attendance numbers moved HMNS into the top ten.

1. Pittsburgh, PA
2. San Francisco, CA
3. Seattle, WA
4. Portland, OR
5. Philadelphia, PA

America's Most Livable Communities

Once a decade, Partners for Livable Communities, a national non-profit organization working to restore and renew America's communities, selects the most livable places in the country. The 30 communities selected for the 2000's were chosen because they are attractive places to live, work, play, visit, retire, raise a family, attend a university, grow a business, and promote diversity.

Large Cities (300,000+ residents)

1. Charlotte, NC
2. Cincinnati, OH
3. Denver, CO
4. FORT WORTH, TX
5. Jacksonville, FL
6. Kansas City, MO
7. Louisville, KY
8. San Diego, CA
9. San Jose, CA
10. Tulsa, OK

National Park Units in Major Urban Areas

Houston presently has no Federal park units, though one has been in development for nearly ten years. Some of our regional neighbors have benefited greatly from the interpretation they provide and the attraction they provide to the cities where they are located.

New Orleans has two National Parks:
Jean Lafitte National Historical Park and Preserve
New Orleans Jazz National Historical Park

San Antonio has one National Park:
San Antonio Missions National Historical Park

El Paso has one National Park:
Chamizal National Memorial

Houston will one day join these ranks with the Buffalo Bayou National Heritage Area.

Here are the numbers of National Parks in other cities:
New York City - 12
San Francisco Bay Area - 11
Boston - 10

Some cities with no Federal park units include Dallas, Phoenix and Chicago. Los Angeles and Atlanta each have two in their vicinity.

The development of the Houston Museum of Culture will have great potential in a symbiotic relationship with the Buffalo Bayou National Heritage Area. Though Federal park units are often severely under-developed and under-funded, the park will provide many opportunities, including:

Opportunities for increased visitation to the greater Houston area as the new park and Houston Museum of Culture will provide greater incentive to travel to Houston to explore its history and cultures

Opportunities for collaboration between the Houston Museum of Culture, its academic and community partners, and the Federal park.

Houston Museum of Culture will have many advantages for the Houston community beyond the Federal park, including: Broader content provided by the Houston Museum of Culture; and, Broader academic and community involvement in its development and operation; and, While Houston has exciting content for at least five national park units, but it will likely never see most of these developed, Houston Museum of Culture will present these topics and will look at past, present and future.

Houston is a much younger city than most of the above cities, but it has risen to be one of the largest US cities and will be on the frontlines to face many of the future issues and changes to our ways of life around the nation and throughout the world.

Houston does not lack historic context either; the region's written history is generally much older than the above cities. There are many opportunities to educate Houstonians and international visitors, while presenting Houston universities, industries, community and civic leaders, educators and diverse people at the forefront of world issues and interests.

Houston Ranks High in Other Areas

Houston ranks very high nationally and internationally for business. It is the city's reputation as the "free enterprise" city that has made it both successful in business and interesting for its history and diverse people; but at the same time, it has not fully taken advantage of its cultural resources and it has not developed the institution to interpret its legacy for the city and the world.

Following are some of Houston's typical rankings:
